Fire Insurance Not a Mine of Profit. The prevalent notion that fire insurance, as a business, is compensatory to the capital employed is a fallacy which experience, based on facts and figures, can easily explode. Because certain companies, still alive, may be able to make a good present showing of assets in hand and of fair dividends in past years, the public jumps to the conclusion that the business must be essentially profitable. Nothing could be further from the truth. That there remain in existence so many sound companies, and that their rerecord has so fair a seeming of prosperity is, indeed, gratifying. But to infer therefrom that profit or prosperity is a characteristic of fire-underwriting involves the convenient but unfair forgetting of an marks the separation of a very large section enormous wreckage of insurance capital in of the cliff from the body of the mountain, the case of hundreds of companies borne and that the break will result sooner or under by disaster-to say nothing of other millions of enforced assessments to repair and right many of the companies which have

It will be the companies, and absorbed a total of $37,000.-000 of insurance capital. And, finally, we have the more recent episode of St. John, where $6,588,000 of insurance money was so effectually cremated.

Here, then, are four lurid spots in the latterday annals of the business which cost insurance companies about $100,000,000 to wipe out, thereby discounting at a swoop all hope of profit for many a year. Meanwhile, too, the depleting process has gone on at the rate of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year, apart from these exceptional but not improbable conflagrations. That any companics are left alive to tell the tale is of itself a wonderful fact, especially when the low rates, the business depression, and the fierce competition are considered. To talk of such a business being a mine of profit, under the circumstances, is simple nonsense. In point of fact, capital thus invested is and must be a most precarious venture, even when adequate rates prevail. Only by the most skilful and vigilant management can fire-underwriting be made to tion every year, and that he expected pay its costs, and then only in combination with a degree of good fortune which even that the corporation had no printing

For some years past it has happened that New York has been exempt from sweeping conflagrations, and to this fact is due the temporary exhibit of prosperity made by most of our local companies. But the great New York fire is bound to come, sooner or class of offices and send the mourners about the streets. Pending this possibility, it will be wise to judge the business and its profitableness less by the large dividends certain companies are making out of old surplus and rather more by the teachings of experience and the losses which the near future may have in its keeping .- New York Bulletin.

"The maiden's sigh may roar like the cataract of Niagara." Professor D. E. Hughes has given a full account of the microphone to the Royal Society of London, and described the steps by which he was led to the invention. He is most widely known in England as the inventor of a type-printing telegraph instrument which is in general use in that country. Although he is an accomplished electrician, the apparatus which he has employed for his new experiments is of the simplest character and the most trifling cost. With it he has made the footsteps of a house-fly distinctly audible; and all these sounds, after being intensified, are transmitted to any needful distance by the ordinary telephone. RICHMOND, VA., May 29, 1878. To the Editors of the Dispatch:

Sirs,-In justice to the membership of the Independent Order of Good Templars BUSINESS-CARDS. in Virginia, working under the jurisdiction of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of the World, I desire to say that there is only one Grand Lodge of the above Order in this State, which has had no Grand-Lodge meeting since the 14th of November, at which time I was elected secretary of the same. Any other individual furnishing you information concerning the said organization and representing himself as its grand worthy secretary is an impostor, and will be dealt with as such in the courts of the State. Respectfully, R. A. GREEN, Grand Worthy Secretary Independent Order of Good Templars.

MANCHESTER AND VICINITY.

Iron-Thieves .- Mayor Clarke sentenced William Hill to ten days in jail, with fifteen lashes added, for stealing iron from the Richmond and Danville railroad yards. The case of Lewis Washington and other parties were continued until to-day.
